Fill Me In Radiance, a line filler used in Europe and South America for years, is now being tested in the U.S. It's pricier than collagen (about $1,000 per treatment, versus $450), and it's more painful to receive as an injection, but Radiance certainly has its advantages: "While collagen usually lasts about three months, Radiance has been proven to last as long as five years," says New York plastic surgeon Robert Guida. "And whereas collagen is injected into the dermis, where the wrinkle is, Radiance is injected beneath, so it supports and surrounds the area."
